Arresting Tale - By Frank Gill in York, Pennsylvania, USA

A few years ago I was chosen for the juror pool at the county courthouse in Pennsylvania. The defendant's counsel asked if any body knew or was related to any law-enforcement people.

I indicated that I knew someone in that field -- state trooper John "Gotcha"!

Well, the courtroom burst out in laughter, including the judge. Needless to say, I was dismissed as a juror.

Death of Father Egan
Saturday October 20th 1888

The Moe Register

Feelings, of the deepest sorrow were expressed amongst all classes on Saturday when it became known that the Rev. T. J. Egan has died at the Presbytery, most unexpectedly, at half past 10 o'clock in the morning. On Friday, fortnight Father Egan was suddenly called to Jeetho, some distance beyond Poowong. The long ride, over a wretched road proved too much of a test of his strength, and he was considerably exhausted afterwards. The rev. gentleman, however, attended to his duties as usual, and on Sunday week made the Journey to Yarragon and Trafalgar by trolley. He complained of feeling ill on the afternoon of that day, on his return, and took to his bed, which he never afterwards left. Drs., Nolan, Trumpy, and Wilmott, the later coming from Melbourne, were most unremitting in their attention, and did all that human aid could do. Father Egan, however, passed peacefully away a little after 10 o'clock on Saturday morning, the cause of death, it is said, was acute inflammation of the lungs, brought on by continual colds, at the early age of 43 years.

We learn that the deceased gentleman came to the colony about a quarter of a century ago, and was at first connected with the Wangaratta parish as assistant to Father Galew. Father Egan shortly afterwards succeeded Father Galen (sic) who died. Wangaratta, it may be mentioned, was one of the most extensive and most important parishes in the colony, and Father Egan was the youngest priest. He became, one of the most popular men in the North-East, and he was held in the highest esteem, by all classes. He was most amiable and generous to a fault, an enthusiastic athlete, and an excellent horseman. He was foremost in every movement calculated to benefit the district, no matter from what source it emanated.

It was his large mindedness and total disregard of self which ever manifested themselves, and which made him everybody's friend, without respect to creed. Father Egan was also a most zealous worker. When he first went to Wangaratta he had a large church completed and freed from debt. He was also a strong advocate for schools, and exerted himself to establish them wherever and whenever an opportunity presented itself. The presbytery at Wangaratta - built by his untiring energy - was considered the best building in the district. It was he who provided the town of Wangaratta with the handsome St Patrick's Hall. At Moyhu, Major Plains and Benalla, his influence for good was felt, schools being established at the two first named localities, while a splendid church was raised at Benalla. Owing to ill health Father Egan was obliged to ask to be removed from Wangaratta. Before leaving he was the recipient of a most flattering testimonial, which was subscribed to by all classes throughout the length and breadth of his extensive parish. After spending some time in the Geelong Mission he was removed to Sale and thence to Warragul, in the beginning of this year. During his mission in this parish Father Egan endeared himself to his flock, and made numerous friends outside of his own church. The deceased gentleman's parents and brothers reside at Colac. Miss Egan, for whom the deepest sympathy is felt, has been staying with her brother at the presbytery. We had almost omitted to say that Father Egan was for years president of the Wangaratta hospital, and he was also interested in the hospital movement here, as evidence of which we may state he was one of the first to subscribe liberally towards the funds. The remains of the deceased were removed from the Presbytery to the Roman Catholic Chapel at 9 o'clock on Sunday Morning. On Monday morning at 5 o'clock mass was celebrated Father Heffernan officiating. The remains encased in a plain but neat coffin, were conveyed to the railway station, thence to Colac by Rail where the interment took place yesterday (19 Oct 1883). From the Warragul News

A MIRACULOUS ESCAPE ON THE RAILWAY

August 11th 1888 - The Moe Register

A most miraculous escape from death occurred on Saturday night last to a young man named Arthur Doherty, a resident of the two-mile. It appears that he had occasion to come to Moe for provisions, and left at about 11 o'clock at night for his home, walking on the railway line, being a much better road than the bush track. The Narracan train is later on Saturday nights in proceeding to its destination owing to the boiler of its engine having to be cleaned out, and was about to start a few minutes after 11 o'clock. A goods train for Sale arrived in the meantime at the local station, and started on its journey before the Narracan train. The unfortunate man had proceeded about a quarter of a mile when he heard a train coming, and believing it to be the Narracan train, did not attempt to get off the main line when the goods train overtook him before he was aware of his danger. Fortunately the goods train was fitted with a cowcatcher for clearing the line, and this swept Doherty off the track, and thus no doubt saved his life. Cahill, the engine driver, who happened to be looking out, saw something thrown off the line, and thinking some animal had been run over, went forward on the foot plate to see if any damage had been done, to the engine, when he found a bag containing provisions on one of the buffers. The train was at once brought to a standstill, and a search made, guard Bennett at the same time coming back to Moe to protect the train as well as to obtain assistance. After some considerable time, Doherty was found a short distance from the rails, bleeding profusely from the head, but quite conscious. He was at once placed in the van of the goods train and taken on to the Sale station, the laden trucks being left at Morwell, and the distance of 40 miles was accomplished in the space of an hour. On arriving at Sale the injured man was carried on a stretcher to the Gippsland Hospital, where he was at once attended to by Dr. M'Lean, who after thoroughly examining him, found that he had several wounds on his head and face and that several small bones on his right leg were broken, but after receiving treatment from the doctor was found to be improving considerably, and is not so seriously hurt as was first supposed. Mr G. Kearsey, porter at the local station, kindly volunteered to accompany the sufferer to the hospital, and did all that was possible to alleviate the pains of the unfortunate man. Had Doherty walked another 20 paces he would have got clear of the main line. Some few months ago a man named Jacob Green was run over by a train near the same spot where the accident occurred, and was so seriously injured that he died a few hours after admission to the hospital.

MOE COAL-MINING COMPANY

July 28th 1888 - The Moe Register

An extraordinary meeting of shareholders in the Moe Coal Mining Company was held on Thursday at Scott's Hotel. There was a large attendance of shareholders and Dr. George Moore, chairman of the company, occupied the chair. The business of the meeting was to consider the report of the mining manager of the 30th June and the condition of the mine generally, and to discuss the question of sinking a shaft south of the present workings. The mining manager Mr. Devey, who was present, reported that in extending the main tunnel, which was in a distance of 1,600ft. towards the top of the range, frequent faults were met, and the coal was thinner as the covering ground got shallower. It would be necessary to sink a shaft to strike the seam at a depth of 150ft. or upwards and drive under the lofty tableland, where he was certain that good coal would be found. A long discussion took place, and a motion requesting the directors to proceed with the sinking of the shaft, and an amendment suggesting the winding-up of the company, were proposed and seconded. The motion was carried by 18 to 13, and on a poll being taken the numbers were about 8,000 to 3,500 in favour of the motion. The site of the proposed shaft will depend a good deal on the reduction on the royalty at present paid to one of the proprietors of the land leased for mining purposes, which the company cannot afford to pay. It was mentioned at the meeting that during the last 12 months 1,000 tons of coal had been sent from the mine, which realised £4,900, but this had left no profit to the company. The Railway Department was a large customer, but the price given was not considered proportionate to that paid for New South Wales coal, quality considered, and with carriage added to Warragul and other stations more distant to Melbourne. When the Railway Department erected a weighbridge at Moe a lengthened competing trial would be asked for. In other matters every facility was rendered by the department to the company. The carriage of the coal was also too high, and an effort would be made to get a fairer rate established. The mine was handicapped at present all round. With a good modification of these three items, and an improvement in the regularity, thickness, and quality of the coal, which might be anticipated at either of the two sites where it was proposed to sink the new shaft, a more prosperous state of affairs might be expected.
