Sally Rigley is a registered psychologist who holds a Masters Degree in Developmental and Educational Psychology, specialising in Autism Spectrum Disorders. Whilst completing her studies Sally worked as a specialist therapist for 8 years assisting children and adults with autism to increase their skills both academically and socially within educational and home settings.

Upon completion of her Masters Sally commenced work at Gateways Support Services in Geelong as an integral member of their Autism Assessment Team under the supervision of Dr Richard Eisenmajer. Within this role Sally conducted Autism Assessments and provided sensitive and informative feedback to parents/carers.

In addition, Sally has worked as a psychologist for the Education Department providing educational assessments, counselling, family and individual support to children, adolescents and their families who required specialised assistance. During her time at the Education Department Sally conducted Anger/Anxiety Management groups for children in their primary years with an Autism Spectrum Disorder.

On a private basis Sally has been invited by a number of community and government agencies to educate their staff and clients on Autism Spectrum Disorders and assist with behaviour management. Currently Sally is
