Introducing Janet Buick

The Malvern Historical Society is looking forward to working with the Stonnington History Centre's new Local History Librarian, Janet Buick. We asked Janet to share a little of her background and interests with our newsletter readers:

"I started as a Local History Librarian at the Stonnington History Centre in late May. This is a welcome return to the history field for me as history is one of my early loves. I've been passionate about history ever since my childhood in Papua New Guinea where we were surrounded by the detritus from World War 2. It was ever present, a live mine was even unearthed in the playground of my primary school! We travelled a lot and lived in many different places when I was young and history was a good way of grounding myself and exploring the zeitgeist of a new community. My first degree is in Australian and South East Asian History from Murdoch University in Perth, and my library studies qualifications are from Curtin University. After graduating I worked at the State Archives and J. S. Battye Library of West Australian History at the State Library of WA. I worked there for 11 years doing a variety of roles from Map Librarian, Oral History Librarian, Rare Books Librarian, Chief Researcher and Indexer, Ephemera Librarian. I trained with Public Library Services on how to set up local history collections and was on the Board of Management for the Perth Theatre Trust Archives.

After moving to Melbourne in 1995, I coordinated the National Resource Centre for Oxfam Australia for many years, and while there supervised the creation of their Archives. Most recently I've been working at Melbourne Polytechnic (formerly NMIT) as a Faculty Liaison Librarian across their vocational and higher education programs. It's fantastic to return to history and to work with the extraordinary collection at the Stonnington History Centre. I can't think of another Australian collection quite like it, and it's a testament to the passion for history of the Stonnington community. When I'm not being an Archivist/Librarian I spend my time hand spinning and knitting, reading and gardening, sailing and travelling. But most importantly I love spending time with my husband and delightful 13 year old son."

Open Day at the Brighton General Cemetery

An Open Day will be held at the Brighton General Cemetery on Sunday 18th October 2015, 10am – 4pm, to celebrate the 160 anniversary of the establishment of the Brighton General Cemetery. Enjoy historical displays, self-guided walks and much more. Further details: Lois 9558 4248

Three students, Jenny Divine, Thu Hien Dinh and Eduardo De Luca, have designed a very detailed website as part of their University of Melbourne Master of Urban Planning degree. The website features measured drawings, photographs, field notes, line drawings, historical and architectural research, models and a virtual tour relating to St James' Anglican Church, on the corner of High Street and Burke Road, Glen Iris. <https://stjamesanglicanchurch.wordpress.com/>

Louis William Holmes

In her autobiography, Hold Your Head Still Daisy (Self-published 2014) Marjorie Cameron remembers her Grandpa Holmes. 'Grandpa Holmes, Louis William, was born in Cheltenham, England and lived and attended school in Malvern, England....and was buried in Cheltenham, Australia'.

A Melbourne newspaper printed around that time stated that he was known as Malvern's "Dad" and that he had been a member of the council unopposed for twenty-five years, was elected their mayor twice and that the suburb of Holmesglen had been named in his honour. Grandma and Grandpa married in Christchurch, New Zealand, and after their first child, Louis William (the Second), was born, the little family settled in Malvern, Victoria.

One of their family homes was in Wattletree Road, Malvern and another was located in a somewhat woodsy area in Dandenong Road, Malvern. Dandenong Road was quite rural at that time and one of Mum's favourite memories of her childhood home was of the family cow that would shove its head through the kitchen stable-type door in the hope of having a good gander at the family's goings on.

My only memory of Grandpa Holmes was of a tall man who had a nice kindly old face and snowy white hair, who celebrated his birthdays at Scott Grove, Glen Iris. At these yearly birthday parties he would ask each one of his grandkids to stand up and give a little performance and then he would reward us with a small gift each. His reason for giving presents on his birthday was that he felt grateful for being able to celebrate another one with his loved ones.

On one of these nights when Norma and I had together given our rendition of 'In that little old church in the valley (which was a lovely old ballad that Mum had sung to her little ones), his gift to each of us was a pretty cup, saucer and plate, and we afterwards always used these at home for our cups of tea.

Mayor, Cr Louis W. Holmes

Louis William Holmes was Mayor of the Town of Malvern August 1901 - August 1902, and City of Malvern 1919-1920. He was a councillor from 1898-99 to 1932-33. Holmes was born in 1858.

He established a business in Glenferrie Road Malvern and lived at Ronaldsay in Winter Street Malvern. He was a member of the Masonic fraternity and president of the Toorak United Temperance League. On two occasions he unsuccessfully contested the Toorak seat in the State Parliament. In August 1902, the Prahran Chronicle reported on the presentation to Mayor Holmes, by Malvern councillors, of a silver cradle mounted on a platform of fiddle-back blackwood. The presentation marked the occasion of the birth of a daughter, Doreen, to Holmes and his wife Marion. Louis Holmes died in 1933.

The Smiths and Grong Grong

One of our members, Anne, has been sharing her memories.

'My grandmother, Caroline Smith, bought Grong Grong and its acres from Mrs. Ross Soden and subdivided the part of it adjoining Evans Court. When my parents married, she gave them No 30 Evans Court. My mother found it difficult having her mother-in-law living close by in Grong Grong (she used to visit often and she checked out the tidiness of the cupboards from time to time).

The name of the architect of No 30 was King and my mother was very scornful of the King Plan. Originally the windows were of leadlight but gradually she replaced them with glass. It was always a very crowded house, even after the new kitchen and dining room were added. I was one of five children. There were always extras, children who came to stay for a short time'.

Tyner's Grain and Produce Store

Michael Wood recently found a copy of a photograph of Tyner's Grain and Produce Store. The image was first published in the 'City of Prahran Jubilee History and Illustrated Handbook: South Yarra, Toorak, Malvern, etc', Melbourne: Periodicals Publishing Company, 1906, and was described as 'Situated right opposite the Windsor Railway Station, the Windsor Produce Store doubtless occupies a prominent position. Besides being a commission agent, Mr Tyner is a wholesale and retail, wood, coal and produce merchant. The store is commodious and also well-proportioned in so far as goods for sale are concerned. It is one of those establishments wherein a purchaser generally happens to immediately see the line that is required.

The full address of the store is 178 Albert Street, Windsor. Telephone 520'.

William Tyner's brother, James (and another brother, Ralph), a wood and coal merchant, opened a store in High Street, Malvern. The Sands & McDougall postal directories (and rate books) show that James (& Ralph) Tyner set up their own store in High Street in Malvern, initially at 146 High Street (on the south side, between Lambeth Avenue and Glenferrie Road), c1903, and later at 197 High Street (north side, between Mercer Road and Glenferrie Road), c1910.

South West Corner, Glenferrie and Malvern Roads, Malvern

Byrne's Service Station, Glenferrie Road
Malvern. Reg No 61740
(State Library of Victoria)

The Malvern Hill Hotel, on the north-west corner of Malvern and Glenferrie Roads, was for the hamlet of Gardiner, an inn of some importance, with its five parlours, four bedrooms and outside, another two bedrooms. Opposite the hotel, on the south-west corner of Malvern Road, was the local stockyard. It was here that stock, travelling from Gippsland to Melbourne, was yarded. Stockmen's horses were bedded in the six stall stable, while their masters found food and shelter within the hotel.

There were also three or four water holes in the stock yard. Long after the time when stock was driven along Malvern Road the paddock was known to the villagers by the name of the "Old Stockyard". Traces of the water holes remained for many years. It was from close to this old stockyard paddock that an Albert cab left for its trip to Prahran.

A garage was built on the corner of Glenferrie Road and Malvern Road Malvern around 1927. It was known first as Southern Cross Service Station Pty Ltd, then as Byrne's Service Station. Leslie Perrott was the architect of the original garage.

Leslie M Perrott founded his architectural firm, Leslie M. Perrott & Associates, in 1914. The firm specialised in the use of concrete in residential work. Their inter-war works included the Alexander Hotel (now the Park Plaza) and the Chevron Hotel, which was constructed in just sixteen weeks. At one time Perrott was the president of the Building Industry Congress.

The firm also designed the new 'Prahran Pool' in 1962 and the Flinders Gate development in Flinders Street, which was later renamed the Gas & Fuel Towers. The plans for the 'Proposed Gasoline filling station, Glenferrie Road and Malvern Road, for Mr George C. Bestor. Creator: Leslie M Perrott, (Architect) 1926' are in the Stonnington Local History Collection. They include the architect's blueprint, the floor plan, sections and elevations for the service station. Perrott was awarded the Barrett Memorial Medal for his contribution in town planning in 1955. The garage was purchased by Shell around 1970.

Ellen and John Coleman

In the 19th century a shipload of Irish settlers from County Kerry all came out together to find a new life in Victoria. Among them were the Shanahans. The Victorian Government gave each family a pig, a sow, a cow, and twenty acres of land at £2 an acre. They attempted to develop market gardens but not very successfully. Good water was scarce and legend has it that they drank too much. Mrs Coleman, who was to live to the age of 94, was a Shanahan from South Road Brighton.

A number of other Irish families had improved their circumstances by coming to Australia. Among them were the Colemans. It was John Coleman who married Ellen Shanahan in 1891.

John was one of 12 children who were born to Patrick and Ellen (Sullivan) who emigrated from County Cork and settled on a large property at Cheltenham. John was the second of the surviving boys.

John Coleman ran the Malvern Vale Hotel from 1889, and he and Ellen's children included John, Denis, Eileen, Vincent, Ernest, Elsie, Raymond and Alan. John Coleman's obituary in 1940 describes the publican as 'an exemplary citizen and hotelkeeper'.

A robbery at the hotel in the 1950s made headlines in The Sun newspaper.

Montpelier Ladies College & Kindergarten

Miss Anne Taylor Perrott appears to have started her private school in c1899. Montpelier was first noted in the Sands & McDougall Directory in 1900 in Thanet Street, Malvern. The street number 45 had been allocated to the school by 1905. The college was moved to 158 Wattletree Road, corner Lysterville Avenue, Malvern, in 1906. At this time Miss Perrott registered the school as primary and sub-primary. The teaching staff included Alice Fischer and Florence Mary Phillips, with visiting teachers M.S. Schollich, who taught French, and Mrs Richardson, who took the singing class.

The lessons given to the Primary class were composition, writing, English, arithmetic, geography, nature study, drawing, History of Empire, music, physical exercise and drill, manual work, French and algebra. The sub-primary children took reading, spelling, writing, recitation, oral and written composition, arithmetic, drawing, physical training and manual work. Kindergarten classes were also held and the school standard was noted on the registration as that required for primary examination. The school had closed by c1920.

Thomas B. Day

We received an inquiry relating to cabinet-maker Thomas B. Day. The family researcher has in their possession an oval chess table, which they believe was made late in the eighteenth century. They recently discovered the words 'T B Day. Maker.' Prahran on the underside of the table. Thomas Day rented a timber shop and dwelling at 9 (later 11) King Street, Prahran, which was situated on the north side of the street, near the Chapel Street end. According to the Sands & McDougall postal directories, Day was operating here between c1878 - c1886. The premises have since been demolished. The following article appeared in The Argus, 22 November 1882.

Casualties and Offences

'A fire broke out on Saturday afternoon in the workshop of a cabinet-maker named Thomas Day, which adjoined his residence in King Street Prahran. An alarm was quickly given, and Sergeant Parkinson and several other persons who happened to be in the vicinity at the time managed to confine the flames to the building by throwing buckets of water until the fire brigade arrived. The fire was then put out, but not before the contents of the workshop and a number of valuable tools had been consumed. The loss sustained by Day is covered by insurance in the Victorian Insurance Company. The building was surrounded by a number of wooden tenements, and had it not been for the exertions of the sergeant and his comrades, a serious conflagration would probably have occurred'.

Stonnington Research Enquiries

A member of the Friends of Burnley Gardens requested information on Frances Georgina Watts Higgins (Ina). Ina was one of Burnley Horticultural College's earliest student (around 1903) and she lived in Malvern for many years. In 1890 Ina lived at the family home, Killenna, Sorrett Avenue Malvern. In 1899 Ina was elected to the Malvern Board of Advice, an advisory body to advise the municipal council on local matters.

She never married and continued to live at Killenna until the time of her death in 1948. The researcher is interested in finding out more about her landscaping career.

We have very little information relating to the Malvern Board of Advice. Di Foster searched the catalogue and found only a couple of mentions. According to newspaper reports the Board was generally concerned with government schools in the municipality. Activities and advice included planting trees on school reserves, school enrolments, Christmas entertainment, reporting on the need for additional classrooms and funding from Council for projects. A Gardiner/Malvern Councillor appears to have been either a member or Chair of the Board. Other members could have been local traders and residents. Ina Higgins was appointed as a "correspondent" to the Board in December 1899. This may imply she was in a secretarial position. In that year, J. Dulfer, who had been appointed as the Governor's farrier, was Chairman of the Board. The Malvern Board goes back to at least 1873 when the Board of Advice was elected for the Shire of Gardiner. The last report to be found on Trove appears in 1910.

30 McKinley Avenue
Malvern 2015

There was an enquiry about 50 McKinley Avenue Malvern. Lined with Edwardian style houses, McKinley Avenue (formerly known as Malvern Avenue), was named after Alexander McKinley, proprietor of several Melbourne newspapers including Punch and the Bulletin. He was a Malvern Councillor (1885-1920), Shire President (1890-93), Mayor (1900/01, 1918,19, 1910/11) and MLA for Toorak. The clock in the tower of the Stonnington City Centre (Malvern Town Hall) was presented by McKinley in 1891. He was also a special magistrate for the Children's Court and was President of the Children's Welfare Association and fought in Parliament for legislation protecting children's welfare. 50 McKinley Avenue was built in 1899. We were contacted by the Australian Koala Foundation who are conducting research into the fur trade. They were also interested in finding the personal accounts of residents during the late 19th and early 20th centuries. We are aware that there had been a sighting of a koala at Heatherleigh, East Malvern. John Henry James Symonds purchased 3 acres of land in East Malvern with a frontage to Waverley Road, prior to 1887. By the following year Symonds had erected a brick house of 5 rooms facing Waverley Road. In 1889 the house had been extended and consisted of 8 rooms with a four roomed wood cottage and brick stables. The property was described as including 3 acres in Glen Iris Park. Symonds' house was known as Heatherleigh in 1890. Around 1900 Theodore Camerer, a tea merchant, occupied Heatherleigh. However Symonds returned to Heatherleigh in 1906. Other occupiers included John Wallace, George Hunt, a farmer, and Samuel Tetley, an importer, who proceeded to subdivide it. Samuel's daughter Dorothy (Barnes), recalled the family having lived at Heatherleigh from 1918. Mrs Barnes remembered the property having stables, a well, a cow called Blossom, and a koala living in Jane and Stephen are searching for any records relating to Jane's maternal great-grandparents Capt. John and Elizabeth Ogilvie. They lived at Kyalah, which was situated at the north-west corner of Heyington Place and Torresdale Road, Toorak, close to Heyington Station, between 1900 and 1921.

One researcher is undertaking a Protecting Heritage Places project relating to the Lismore Presbyterian Church. Five of the stained glass windows in the church were completed by the artists and makers, Ferguson and Papas, who had a studio at 6 The Avenue, Malvern East. We have received requests relating to: Hilliard Street; Malvern East; Elizabeth Street; Malvern; Railway Avenue; Armadale; 3 Bride Street; Malvern; Serrell Street; Malvern East; the Robert Cochrane designed Malvern Memorial Kindergarten, in Orchard Street; Armadale; 99 Greville Street; Prahran; the Fox family who lived at Oyama; the builder of the Toorak Uniting Church manse and the family of Stanley Melbourne Bruce; the eighth Prime Minister of Australia, who was born in Toorak, the youngest of five siblings. Information was requested on W. M. Shields who was the honorary architect for Scots Church in Collins Street from 1910-1949 and a Fellow Member of the Royal Victorian Institute of Architects. At one time, after 1899, he lived at Wyuna, 44 Malvern Road, Toorak. Researchers have been searching for photos of Nareeb, Kooyong Road, Toorak, and Hadley Hall, Kensington Road, South Yarra. We were approached by a collector who wondered if we had an example of early resident William Philpott's signature to help him verify a document relating to an early Victorian cricket team. We had a request for information on the family and the furniture of the colonial cabinet maker George Thwaites. His firm supplied furniture to Toorak House in 1854 for Governor Hotham.

We received an enquiry relating to a soldier who had lived in Myamyn. After a little research it was found that it was not linked to the Malvern mansion Myamyn or to Myamyn Street, but to Myamyn, a small settlement situated on the main road between Hamilton and Portland in south-west Victoria. Other requests have related to Gardiners Creek Road in 1858 (later known as Toorak Road) the Ilton and Oliver families, Mowbray, 18 St Georges Road Toorak, Belmont, Osborne Avenue, Glen Iris, 130 Toorak Road South Yarra, the home of Mr. Dunbar Hooper, Mr. H.A. MacDonald's home, 146 Toorak Road South Yarra, a house in South Yarra called Whitelodge, owned by a Mrs. William Smith and Weigall Street. Weigall Street in South Yarra no longer exists. According to our catalogue. Weigall Street was once known as Wicklow Street. The street ran east from Bray Street. It was closed when the Housing Commission developed a high rise housing estate in the area in the 1960s. We were asked about Boston Avenue Malvern East. Houses first appeared in Boston Avenue in the street directory in 1923. 7 Boston Avenue appears to have been built in 1923. Miss Emily Wood was the first occupant in 1923 and Gordon Bousfield is listed there in the directories in 1927.

Thanks to everyone who shares their memories. One of our readers grew up in Glenferrie Road Malvern and remembers the Clydesdale horses carting fresh milk around to homes in glass bottles from Woodmason's Dairy, from the 1960s up to about 1973. Philip recently contacted us after visiting the Bucharest Commonwealth War Cemetery. Most of the graves were of RAF personnel shot down when attacking the oil refineries at Ploesti. One was the grave for Leading Seaman A McLean, an Australian serving with the Royal Navy. His records noted that his parents James and Margaret McLean lived at 6 Horsbury Grove, Malvern, Victoria. The Stonnington History Centre staff could find no links to the McLean family at this address.

Patrick contacted the Society asking for information on University College. His Great Uncle, Vincent Paul Healy, was Dux of Armadale University College in 1903 when he matriculated at the age of 14. There can be some confusion about this school, as for a time in the early 1900s, there were two schools in Armadale both bearing this name. The 1909 edition of the Sands & McDougall directory, for example, lists one establishment in Orrong Road run by Mr Hassett and another of the same name in Densham Road South (now Sutherland Road), run by M. J. and T. A. Linehan in a house named Clydesdale. However, the former school soon became known as Hassett's University College, and later, certainly by the 1920s, simply as Hassett's College. By 1914 it was operating from the Colosseum Arcade in Chapel Street. The other University College, at 33 Sutherland Road, was run by the Linehans from 1895 until the mid 1930s. Vincent attended the one at 33 Sutherland Road Armadale.

Taking Local History to the Community

Malvern Historical Society Committee Members recently joined Kelly O'Dwyer MP for the Higgins 'Community Christmas in July' event. Volunteers from a wider range of Stonnington community groups were thanked for all the work they do. Jane recently met with staff from St Roch's Primary School in Glen Iris where all the classes are currently developing their understanding of history and how it links to their own local community. The Society has arranged for additional copying of the Stonnington Landmark brochures. Sets of all eighteen brochures have been put together and delivered to the Stonnington History Centre. Members enjoyed the guided tour of the RHSV's new exhibition featuring the life of Sir Macpherson Robertson K.B.E. If you missed this visit, just call in at the RHSV. The exhibition will be on display until the end of the year.

Additions to the Stonnington History Collection

- Gerry Coughlin has donated a Dairy Bell ice cream tin.
- Jane Frecheville has donated material relating to the Gascoigne Area Residents Association action group, formed in April 1994, to ensure the area was included with Malvern in the proposed new City of Stonnington municipality. Items, dating from 1994 - 2003, include newsletters "The Gascoigne Gasbag", letters and records relating to annual general meetings 1994 to 2003.
- Margaret Mary Brown and Aherne Collection c1950. Margaret Brown was born on 13th November, 1913. Her grandparents, James and Mary Foy Miller, lived at Moyston, 69 Burke Road, on the corner of Beaver Street. They built and moved into another house at 114 Burke Road, which they also called Moyston. Their daughter Phyllis Foy married Victor Upton Brown. The Browns lived at Upton, 18 Davies Street East Malvern. They had three children, Margaret Mary, Helen Frances, born in 1915 and Rodney Foy born in 1920. Margaret never married and when her mother died she moved to 114 Burke Road, where she remained until her death.
