Driftwood: Escape and survival through art* Eva de Jong-Duldig 2017

At the recent launch of Driftwood: Escape and survival through art Dr Gerard Vaughan, Director of the National Gallery of Australia, said ‘This book offers an insight into the cultural life of Australia at a time of enormous change, politically and artistically; and also the transforming contribution to the life of the nation through the talents of immigrants like Karl and Slawa Duldig.’

In 1938 sculptor Karl Duldig, his wife Slawa Horowitz-Duldig – inventor of the modern foldable umbrella – and their baby daughter Eva, left their home in Vienna for an uncertain future. They found brief refuge in Singapore before arriving in Sydney on 25 September 1940. Australia was at war: they were classified as enemy aliens and interned in an isolated camp in northern Victoria.

Author, Eva de Jong-Duldig, was a leading Australian tennis player in the early 1960s. She reached the quarter-finals at Wimbledon and after marrying Henri de Jong, a Dutch national, became Champion of the Netherlands and played Federation Cup. Eva is the founder of the Duldig Studio, a public museum and art gallery in Burke Road Malvern East, and sections of the story describe life in East Malvern in the 1950s and 60s. Eva says “The purpose of this book is principally to encourage and inspire the young. Follow your dreams and your personal creative passion, whatever that may be. These pages show you what can be achieved.” Spanning three continents and three generations Driftwood poignantly captures both the loss that families encounter when they are dislocated by war and the challenges they face when adapting to a new way of life.

The Victorian Community History Awards 2017 were recently presented by the Public Record Office Victoria in partnership with the Royal Historical Society of Victoria, with funding from the Victorian Government. Eva de Jong-Duldig’s Driftwood: Escape and survival through art received a Commendation in the History Publication category.

By our Deeds: Reflections on terms in the Mayoral Office

The History Centre recently commissioned a series of interviews with former Stonnington, Malvern and Prahran mayors, conducted by journalist Andrew Dodd. Those interviewed were Ann Morrow (the first female mayor of Malvern), Chris Gahan, John Chandler, Barry Fenton, Ann O'Shea, Ray Lang, Leonie Hemingway (nee Bourke), Melina Sehr and the late Claude Ullin. The experiences of those who sit in the mayoral office is revealed through the stories they tell of the issues that brought them into council, of the torrid times during municipal amalgamation and the many battles lost and won.

Called 'By our Deeds: Reflections on terms in the Mayoral Office', the highlights podcast – which runs for 30 minutes – is now available online on the Stonnington History Centre's website at <http://www.stonnington.vic.gov.au/Discover/History/Stonnington-History-Centre>

The Melbourne Directories 1847 to 1880

Hobson's Bay from Prahran 1864
Stonnington History Centre - PH8574

The Melbourne Directories, including the Sands and McDougall postal directories, are finally being digitised. The Melbourne directories are a comprehensive listing of city addresses and occupants organised alphabetically by streets across the central city. It is augmented by alphabetical, trade and professional listings, as well as information on leading financial, government, official, ecclesiastical, legal and municipal institutions, and other miscellaneous advertisements, maps and information. The directory includes town as well as suburban listings, with coverage including Melbourne proper and, from year to year, the expanding suburbs of the greater metropolitan region and across Victoria. The scanned collection currently spans directories from 1857 to 1880. Due to size constraints, each yearly directory is broken up into multiple files.

Mr Frank Robinson, City of Malvern Deputy Town Clerk

Thanks Helen Harris OAM, Box Hill Historical Society, who sent through an article she found in The Australian Municipal Journal April 1974. The article related to when Malvern's Deputy Town Clerk, Mr Frank Robinson, was treated to a round of festivities to mark his 50th Anniversary with Malvern Council. Mr Robinson started with Malvern City Council as a junior office boy on February 27, 1924, at the age of 14 and a half. With the exception of four years during the Second World War he served Council continuously from 1924. Better known to the Town Hall staff as 'Robby' he later became Accounts Clerk, Paymaster, Rate Collector, and then in 1951 he was appointed Deputy Town Clerk. During his 50 year term he served under three Town Clerks and 33 different Mayors. He received a handshake, an illuminated address and an engraved silver tray from the Mayor of Malvern, Cr Bert Healy. Mr Robinson shared many of the changes he had seen. He recalled the time when the Malvern Council used a horse and jinker for official transport and he also remembered the first motor vehicle used by the Council. It was an 'A' model Ford. He said 'I can truly say I've never had a better job.'

Stonnington Indigenous Marker No 4 The Aboriginal Mission

Corner of Punt Road and Alexandra Avenue, South Yarra
(Melway: 58 C1)

When visiting the Port Phillip settlement in 1837, Governor Bourke officially approved the use of an 895 acre site south of the Yarra River, just to the east of present-day Anderson Street, as the site of a Government Mission. Wattle and daub huts were erected by convicts to serve as mission buildings. Half an acre of land was planted with vegetables and another half with potatoes.

A report by mission supervisor, George Langhorne, in November 1837 confirmed that sixty to eighty Aboriginal people resided at the mission. About twenty residents were children and fourteen of these were under daily instruction. A large hut served as a schoolroom and dormitory for the children. Residents received food rations and clothes, which they were responsible for mending. Non-resident parents visited the children regularly to check on their wellbeing. Parents were usually prepared to leave their boys at the mission to attend instruction, but Langhorne reported experiencing difficulty engaging the girls in mission activity as their parents forbade interaction between the girls and boys.

In November 1837, two Quakers, George W. Walker and James Backhouse, spent a week visiting Melbourne and the mission. Backhouse explained: 'The parents of the children come to see them at pleasure, and when they wish it, take them out to hunt; but for this the children do not seem much inclined, preferring to be fed on easier terms at the Institution. The parents are not encouraged to make long visits; they are furnished with but a few meals gratuitously, and if they choose to make longer stops, they have to earn their victuals at the rate of two hours' work for eight ounces of meat and twelve ounces of flour.' During 1838, Woiwurrung people frequently removed their children from the mission to participate in cultural activities. When the pupils, who were mostly from Woiwurrung clans, were present, the schoolmaster was engaged daily. By April 1838, the mission was almost exclusively a domain of the Woiwurrung, with only a few Boonwurrung and Wathawurrung people present. Source www.stonnington.vic.gov.au

A moment of friendship 1948

A cricket bat, signed by the Worcestershire County Cricket Club cricket players, was presented to Malvern, Victoria from Malvern, UK, in 1948.

[Transcript of letter]:

Dear Mr. Mayor, It gives me the greatest possible pleasure to extend greetings to you and the citizens of Malvern, Australia, on behalf of the townspeople of Malvern, England.

We in the Motherland are not forgetful of the great service rendered by Australia, particularly by her fighting sons, during the war years, nor are we unmindful of the part she is playing to assist in our post-war recovery; nor too, do we in Malvern, forget the kindness and beneficence of the people of Malvern, Australia in sending of food parcels which have served to enhance the bonds of friendship which exist between the two towns which I can assure you have been very greatly appreciated.

As a small momento of the friendship existing between the two towns and in the hope that it may serve to perpetuate and preserve that friendship, I am to ask you to accept a cricket bat on which is inscribed the signatures of the members of the Worcestershire County Cricket Club, which include, with one exception the signatures of the Worcestershire team which met the Australian XI in the opening match of their 1948 tour.

The missing signature is that of R. Howarth, who at the time the signatures were obtained, was on tour with the England team in South Africa. Also on the bat are the signatures of the members of the Malvern Cricket Club and the Barnards Green Cricket Club, which are the two main Clubs of the town. A cricket bat has been selected as symbolic of the spirit of friendly rivalry between our two countries but at the same time it serves to remind us of the team spirit which has brought us through the dark war years and without which we cannot hope to succeed in building up a new world founded on friendship, fellowship, peace and prosperity. The bat has been despatched to you under separate cover and I am to ask that you will accept it on behalf of the citizens of Malvern, Australia, and to express the hope that it will find a place among the treasured possessions of your City and in the hearts of your citizens as a token of lasting friendship from the people of Malvern, England.

Yours sincerely

F. A. Edwards

Wright's Terrace Prahran

Darren Wright has sent a couple of photographs of his ancestors who were early pioneers of Prahran and after whom Wright's Terrace is named. His great-great-great-grandfather Thomas Wright, who was born in 1825, came from near Oldham in Lancashire. He and his wife Ann Elizabeth (nee Hill), who was born in 1824, sailed from Plymouth and landed at Port Phillip on board the "Palmyra" (a 420 ton immigrant vessel) in 1848 after a voyage of 96 days. Thomas operated a farm and carrier's business in Prahran and soon realised there was money to be made by supplying the pastoralists far outside Melbourne. A second farm was located at what is today called Eddington and it is still in the family after all these years. The two photographs are of Darren's great-great-great-grandmother, Ann Elizabeth and his great-great-grandparents Joseph and Ellen. No photographs are known to exist of Thomas who died as a result of a dray falling on him in 1863. Joseph was born in 1853 on the site now occupied by Maclellans's Big Store (Coles) in Chapel Street. He died at Charlton in 1928. Thomas Wright's name appears in the first Prahran ratebook.

Argyle Street Malvern East

Argyll Street Malvern East was gazetted in 1924 but it was to be many years before houses were built. Some of the surnames of owners/occupiers that appear in the Sands and MacDougall directories in 1957 included Dobson, Pearson, Jakimoff, Lines, Pittock, Sherlock, Lancaster and Hine. The directories also note that a number of houses were being built. Some of the occupations of the new residents in the area included a wholesale fruiterer, a carpenter, a boiler worker and a commercial traveller. One street nearby, Girvan Street, that appears in the original subdivision gazetted in 1924, disappeared completely when land for the railway was set aside. No houses had been built in Girvan Street prior to its acquisition.

The railway line from East Malvern to Glen Waverley was opened in 1930. Passengers from the city had to change trains at East Malvern. A single double-ended Swing Door carriage ran from East Malvern to Glen Waverley, referred to locally as the Flying Matchbox. It consisted of a first-class and a second-class compartment.

Central Park Kiosk Malvern East

Tram enthusiast Ron recently found this tram image on the internet. Ron noted that it could even be the tram's first day as everything looks brand new and the tram seems to be sitting high on its bogies.

The image appears to have been taken with the Central Park Kiosk in the background. The timber-framed kiosk, with a large refreshment room and accommodation for a caretaker, was constructed on the corner of Wattletree and Burke Roads Malvern East in 1911. The supper room was added in the 1920s and dances, meetings and receptions were held at the kiosk, until the poor state of the building led to its demolition in 1973. The Kiosk photo was first published in the City of Malvern Annual Report 1921-22.

400 Waverley Road Malvern East

In 1910 the Salvation Army purchased a Victorian mansion, Scarboro, erected in 1888 for Ravenscroft Stephens on the corner of Waverley Road and Serrell Street in Malvern East. The house was re-named Brightside and used as a sanatorium for 'inebriates'. It accommodated 30 patients, with residents being moved from the Army's home for women in Armadale. Brightside remained as a home for women throughout the next half century.

In 1914 a second house, known as Weeroona, was constructed by the Army for the purpose of providing more accommodation for 'inebriates'. On 24 March 1914 Lady Stonehaven opened Brightside 2, for use as an aged women's retreat.

However, by the 1920s it appears it was no longer being used for this purpose and in 1922, according to John Kirkham in his history of the Salvation Army Southern soup, the Army took over this unused accommodation at the Brightside Sanatorium, calling it Weeroona Aged Ladies Retreat. The bungalow-style house provided for a large number of women for over 50 years. Eventually government assistance enabled the rebuilding of the home with many new facilities to be included in the complex. In 1964 Brightside and Weeroona Homes merged and became known as the Weeroona Senior Citizens' Residence.

By the end of 2016 the site had been cleared and Regis Aged Care built Regis East Malvern, a new luxury aged care facility.

Memories of Melbourne High School

Melbourne High boys on South Yarra station (undated)
Stonnington History Centre - PH887

Russell Jones, a former student at Melbourne High School, was interested in our article on the origins of the site of the school. "When I was there in the late 1970s, the building was falling into rack and ruin. In the dungeon classrooms at the south end of the building, the plaster was falling off the walls, and there were large gaps under the window frames. In winter, when there was a rainy south westerly blowing, the cold wind would whistle through the gaps, and the rooms were freezing. No wonder the teaching staff always wore their academic robes. There were also the twin challenges of the yeast factory in Yarra Street, and the Rosella factory across the river – if the wind was blowing in the right direction, the school would be enveloped in either a miasma of tomato soup, or the gut-wrenching reek of yeast. I much preferred the tomato soup. Today's students don't know what they are missing.

I remember in 1977 the whole school commemorated the Jubilee of the school's original march from Spring Street, Melbourne to Forrest Hill in South Yarra by re-enacting the march. As we started up the old footbridge over the railyards near the Jolimont Workshops and the MCG (after breaking step, of course), it struck me that the boys in front looked like sheep going up the chute to be loaded into a truck – so I started bleating. Within seconds, the entire school was baa-ing and meh-ing!

Let's just say the more serious teaching staff were less than impressed – although I am told it was a matter for some hilarity in the staff room that afternoon."

Nancy Irene Brown

In the 1980s the three principal rooms at Northbrook, now the home of the Stonnington History Centre, were named after prominent women in the community, Ann Morrow, Dorothy Roxburgh and Nan Brown who was recognised in the naming of the Morning Room.

Nan Irene Brown was born in Malvern in 1918. She grew up in Creswick Street, Glen Iris and lived most of her life in Malvern. She attended Gardiner Central School later moving to Melbourne Girl's Grammar School where she was awarded a scholarship for academic achievements. She completed her Leaving Certificate in 1932 towards the end of the depression. Circumstances then required her to get a job in dressmaking and fashion design so she was unable to complete her Matriculation Certificate.

Nan married William (Bill) Gilmour Brown in 1945, at the end of the Second World War. They eventually settled into what became the family home in Hope Street, Glen Iris, just around the corner from Central Park, in the days when Central Park had a kiosk at the corner of Burke and Wattleree Roads. It was a happy marriage and Nan had three children, Heather

Northbrook 2017

(1950), William (Gil) (1954) and Richard (1961). She made sure all received excellent school and university education. In the sixties, Nan ran her own business, a clothing, school wear and haberdashery shop in the shopping strip on Malvern Road, Tooronga. She also kept the books for the wine shop in Glenferrie Road, W. G Brown and Co, run by her husband Bill until he retired in the mid-sixties. (More recently this business became 'Brown's Cellars' before finally being taken over by Safeway/Woolworths in 2005)

During 1970, following the death of Bill, she worked for the Education Department managing the housekeeping arrangements for student accommodation, for teachers in training, at a large house called 'Frank Tate House' in Dandenong Road Armadale. At this time, she moved to live in Spring Road Malvern. Throughout her life, Nan was passionate about education for life and all sorts of matters historical. She returned to study in her late 50s and finally completed her year 12. She subsequently attended numerous writing courses run by the CAE. When she retired, she was not ready to retire when she reached 65!, Nan became more involved in activities in the local community. She was a member of the Malvern Historical Society and was also actively involved in the production of the Malvern News Sheet. Nan was one of a group of pioneering people of vision who, in 1986, first started the activities of the University of the Third Age in Melbourne. Nan died quite unexpectedly in 1987.

Notes from a biography of Nan Brown written by William Gilmour Brown (2013)

Congregational Church Malvern

As early as the 1860s there was a Union church in the Gardiner Road District. Worship was conducted in a wooden building in Union Street, just west of Glenferrie Road. This fellowship moved to a new building in Glenferrie Road, between Wattleree Road and Gordon Grove, in February 1873. The minister was The Rev. James Moss. In January 1883, the building was re-opened as the Malvern Congregational Church.

In 1885, land for a new church was purchased in Glenferrie Road on the south east corner of Winter Street. The memorial stone was laid in 1886. The church was built to the design of architects, Billing & Son. A second foundation stone was laid when the building was extended in 1889. The Malvern Congregational Church was demolished in 1966 to make way for Coles Supermarket.

Taking Local History to the Community

Members of the Society enjoyed Stonnington History Centre's recent 'The Mayoral Office: more than robes and chains' exhibition on display in the Northbrook Pop-Up Gallery during October.

Lorraine and Jane attended the History Victoria awards, organised annually by the Royal Historical Society of Victoria in cooperation with the Public Record Office Victoria. The Society is looking forward to working with the RHSV's new Executive Officer, Rosemary Cameron and Administration Officer, Farzana Ahmed. Jane attended a meeting of the RHSV's History Victoria Support Group.

Members of the MHS Committee visited Regis Aged Care, 400 Waverley Road, Malvern East. We look forward to providing them with guest speakers and photo enlargements for displays. Pat and Lorraine led our October History Week walk which was followed by a visit to the Stonnington History Centre at Northbrook and a visit to the exhibition. We were warmly welcomed by Ellen Porter, Team Leader, Stonnington History Centre. There was lots of interest in our stall and display at the Malvern Central School Fair. Special thanks to our helpers Roxanne, Lorraine, Ann, Marisa, Gwen, Jane, Marilla, Gregor and Lindsay.

The Committee would like to thank Nikki for all the work she does with the Malvern Historical Society Facebook page! Thanks also to Linda, Jeffreys Books, 140 Glenferrie Road Malvern, info@jeffreysbooks.com.au, for supporting the Malvern Historical Society throughout the year. Don't forget that all the Stonnington local history books make great Christmas presents and they are available through Jeffreys Books and our Stonnington Libraries. Thank you also to the team at MBE Malvern, 45 Glenferrie Road Malvern, malvern@mbe.com.au, Ron, Jade and Shaun. They are responsible for our photo enlargements, brochures, children's puzzles and our very popular newsletter!
